Partnerships and Network Management for Development: A case of ResilientAfrica Network (RAN)

USAID believes that partnerships and networks can be an effective way to work in development with many institutions and organization which are active and add value. Similarly, ResilientAfrica Network (RAN) believes that leveraging partnerships and networks, knowledge, scholarship, and creativity could help build institutional capabilities and reduce vulnerabilities and increase development. The purpose of this planned webinar is to increase the capacity of HEIs to convene stakeholders and governments within the respective countries to identify development challenges, for rigorous research and translation across the value chain. This webinar will be led by Research Technical Assistance Center (RTAC) partner Makerere University ResilientAfrica Network (RAN).
